Press Release: Urgent Call to Address Systemic Failures in Local Healthcare

By Marcel Ray Duriez

The healthcare system in our community is facing a profound and disturbing crisis. I have personally witnessed patients subjected to extreme neglect, with some left in filth for weeks at a time, their basic needs ignored by the very individuals entrusted with their care. In the most shocking instances, deceased, declining, patients were neglected post-mortem, and during what should be recovery and, reflecting a culture of indifference that prioritizes convenience, profit, or bureaucratic expedience over human life and dignity.

This neglect is high corporate level, and crooked level management, is compounded by systemic failures in management and oversight. Assistant nurses and nurses, despite their essential roles, often receive only limited training, insufficient to meet the intellectual and practical demands of high-quality patient care. Many work 12-hour shifts under extreme pressure, regularly foregoing meals and breaks to tend to patients, often under the threat of termination from supervisors who prioritize staffing quotas and administrative compliance over ethical care. When complaints are raised, responses from staff or management are frequently hostile, sometimes violent, and whistleblowers—including nurses—risk retaliation or termination rather than meaningful intervention.

The result is a healthcare environment in which patients suffer neglect, workers endure exploitation and unsafe conditions, and the institutions designed to safeguard health instead perpetuate harm. Human resources departments and central administration frequently fail to address these issues, leaving vulnerable patients and frontline staff without protection or recourse.

This culture of neglect, retaliation, and overwork is unacceptable. It represents a systemic failure of our healthcare institutions that demands immediate public attention and intervention. Patients deserve dignity, cleanliness, and competent care. Healthcare workers deserve safe working conditions, proper training, and support. Administrators must be held accountable, and structural reforms must be implemented to ensure ethical standards are enforced and patient well-being is prioritized above all else.

The time for complacency is over. The public deserves transparency, accountability, and action. I urge local and state authorities, hospital boards, and media outlets to examine these failures and advocate for the urgent reforms our community's patients and healthcare workers so desperately need.
